End of an era - Submarine Veterans of WWII disbands

Submitted by: Pat Householder on 9/19/2012

The National SVWWII organization, established in 1955 to honor WWII subvets and remember the submarine men lost in WWII, formally closed it's national administration at the joint USSVI-SVWWII Convention in Norfolk this year. "There are memorials all over this country they've built," said retired Vice Adm. Al Konetzni, who has long been close with the World War II veterans even though he is not of that era. "These guys started in 1955 doing this for their buddies, so they would not be forgotten. It's a wonderful story of self-image. They said, 'Hey, we're going to do it, and we will do it.'"

Walter "Gus" Kraus, final President of SVWWII said the WWII sub veterans considered themselves a unique group and that uniqueness forged a strong bond. The end of the organization, he said, also represents the "end of an era where we were able to get together and blow our own horn, remembering the circumstances under which we fought." "They will never be forgotten, ever, ever, ever," said Konetzni, a former deputy commander of U.S. Fleet Forces Command and the U.S. Atlantic Fleet. "They gave us our traditions and our spirit. They were our leaders." Of the remaining 2,146 WWII members, due to the passage of time and the ravages of age, only 62 were able to attend the closing ceremony. 1,102 of these WWII men are also members of USSVI.

Each of the SVWWII Chapters has the option to continue meeting as a local 'sub club' and all World War II Submariners are always welcome to attend USSVI meetings in their area.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY U.S. NAVY - 13 Oct 2012 is the U.S. Navy's 237th Birthday. Thank you all for your service in the worlds greatest Navy. Each of you have played a part in the heritage, and legacy that is the United States Navy SUBMITTED BY USSVI OFFICE

World War II submarine veterans forced to disband national group

Published September 23, 2012 from Shipmate Carl Hansen

NEW LONDON, Conn. - The submarine veterans of World War II have seen this coming for a long time. At their national convention this month, 62 veterans attended where thousands used to go. The U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II disbanded at the end of its convention Sept. 7 in Norfolk, Va. Local chapters now must decide whether to continue operating under another name or to dissolve as well.

This month in Groton, J. "Deen" Brown announced to his fellow WWII submarine veterans that the Thames River Chapter has a new name. "Eastern USA Chapter U.S. Submarine Veterans of WWII," he told members before their monthly luncheon at the U.S. Submarine Veterans clubhouse.

"We simply have to face the fact that we're all getting older and, as we do so, eventually we simply cannot remain a viable national organization," said Brown, 90, of Oakdale.

Walter "Gus" Kraus, the last national president, said the veterans who wanted to keep the national group going "until the last man is gone" prevailed in a vote three years ago. Two years ago, the vote was split. By this year's convention, some of the stalwarts had died, or their friends had. Of the 1,100 members, the youngest is 86. The oldest is 102.

It was difficult for the national organization to find members able to serve as officers and to complete all of the administrative tasks. In their last roster, published 10 years ago, the pages listing the deceased members outnumbered those listing active members.

"The guys said, `I was all for staying. My shipmate came to the convention with me. He's gone now and I don't feel like coming," said Kraus, 91, of Crescent Springs, Ky.

The national organization was established in 1955 to honor submarine veterans who served in World War II. Submarines were just 2 percent of the Navy's fleet then, but subs sank more than 30 percent of the Japanese navy and nearly 5 million tons of shipping. About 16,000 men served on submarine war patrols. The submarine force lost 52 boats and more than 3,500 men.

After the sixth annual reunion of the national submarine veterans group, the membership grew rapidly. Memorials were erected.

"There are memorials all over this country they've created," said retired Vice Adm. Al Konetzni, who has long been close with the World War II veterans even though he is not of that era. "These guys started in 1955 doing this for their buddies, so they would not be forgotten. It's a wonderful story of self-image. They said, 'Hey, we're going to do it, and we will do it."

Kraus said the sub veterans considered themselves a unique group and that uniqueness forged a strong bond. The end of the organization, he said, also represents the "end of an era where we were able to get together and blow our own horn, remembering the circumstances under which we fought." Konetzni, who gave the keynote speech at the closing ceremony, said in an interview that the World War II veterans "lived the horror" and "lived the glory," but they do not need the administrative burdens of a federally chartered organization to preserve their memories.

"They will never be forgotten, ever, ever, ever," said Konetzni, a former deputy commander of U.S. Fleet Forces Command and the U.S. Atlantic Fleet. "They gave us our traditions and our spirit. They were our leaders."

Brown, who was state commander in the national organization, said the veterans who live locally enjoy getting together and want to continue as a group.

The new name is intentionally broad, Brown said, because they expect veterans to join from other states when chapters disband.

About 120 World War II submariners live in Connecticut. After Brown announced the national organization's decision and the name change at the luncheon, Warren Wildes said, "It was time." Wildes, 86, of Groton was eating with LeRoy Webb, 88, of Mystic.

"I hate to see them do it but the day had to come sooner or later," Webb said.

He told Wildes he had just read in "Polaris," the official magazine of the organization, that a chief on the USS Moray, one of the submarines he had served on during the war, had died.

"I used to take his girlfriend's picture and put it under my pillow," he said with a laugh at the prank he used to pull to irritate the chief.

Webb said he served on 15 submarines in his career and was away so much that when his wife was asked how long she had been married, she cut the time in half.

Both Webb and Wildes said they thought it was great that the local group would continue to meet. "We look forward to seeing our buddies every month and swapping lies," Wildes said.

"Sometimes you hear the same stories over and over again," Webb said. "But they're still interesting." Many of the World War II submariners are also members of the U.S. Submarine Veterans Inc., which is open to all U.S. Navy submariners. The younger ones in that group began maintaining the memorials and conducting ceremonies when the World War II veterans could no longer do it. The local World War II veterans turned over the upkeep of the U.S. Submarine Veterans WWII National Submarine Memorial East to the Subvets Groton base and the city of Groton in 2005, said John Carcioppolo, base commander. Subvets willingly took on the responsibility.

"The World War II guys are part of our heritage," Carcioppolo said. "And it's up to us to preserve that heritage."

George Jones, 92, another World War II submariner who attended the luncheon, said it's important to him that the memorial is well taken care of because his friends' names are on its Wall of Honor. "I lost a lot of friends during the war and I came close myself," Jones, of Waterford, said. "I hope we will continue to be remembered for many, many years to come."

Museum Ships: Fading Away Expensively

10/7/2012

SUBMITTED BY USSVI OFFICE

There is a growing crisis in dealing with the growing cost of maintaining old warships maintained as museums and tourist attractions. Most of these vessels are in the water and literally rusting away. Many are now in need of major refurbishment, which can cost over $100 million for a carrier or battleship. Even smaller ships (cruisers, destroyers and submarines) can require over $20 million to put back into shape to just sit in the water, receive visitors and not sink or fall apart the next time a major storm hits. Most of the largest of these museum ships are American, largely because the U.S. has had the largest fleet in the world for nearly a century.

GENERAL DYNAMICS TO SUPPORT USS MIAMI FIRE RESTORATION PROGRAM

18 September 2012 http://www.naval-technology.com

KITTERY, Maine -- General Dynamics (GD) Electric Boat has been awarded a contract by the US Navy to support advance planning and preliminary execution efforts for the Los Angeles-class nuclear-powered submarine, USS Miami (SSN 755) fire restoration programme.

Under the $94m cost-plus-fixed-fee delivery contract, the company will manage activities such as assessment and analysis, planning and material procurement, as well as fabrication and initial installation to return USS Miami to the naval fleet with complete mission readiness.

USS Miami suffered fire damage from an accidental blaze in May while it was in a dry dock at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery, Maine, for a 20-month engineered overhaul.

"USS Miami suffered fire damage from an accidental blaze in May while it was in a dry dock at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery, Maine, for a 20-month engineered overhaul."

Northrop Grumman and GD-built Los Angeles-class submarines are armed with land-attack and anti-ship version of the Tomahawk missile, Harpoon anti-ship missiles, as well as 533mm torpedo tubes and Mark 117 torpedo fire control systems.

Powered by a 26MW GE PWR S6G nuclear-pressure water reactor, Los Angeles-class submarines have been designed to support anti-submarine warfare, intelligence gathering, strike missions, and mining, as well as search and rescue missions for the US Navy.

Integrated with Sperry Marine BPS 15 A/16 surface search, navigation and fire control radar, the submarines have electronic support measures (ESM), including a BRD-7 direction finding system, the WLR-1H and WLR-8(v)2 interceptors and the WLR-10 radar warning device.

Additional features of the Los Angeles-class boats include a Northrop AN/WLY-1 acoustic interception and countermeasures system.

The contract includes an option for the total award value to rise to $100m if exercised. Work will be performed at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery, US, and is scheduled to be complete by June 2013.

Navy says submarine, Aegis cruiser collide; no one injured

13 October 2012

Norfolk, Va (AP) — Set Norfolk, Va. — The Pentagon said late Saturday that it is investigating why a Navy submarine collided with an Aegis cruiser during routine operations at an undisclosed location. The U.S. Fleet Forces Command said in a news release that the submarine USS Montpelier and the Aegis cruiser USS San Jacinto collided about 3:30 p.m. No one was injured, and the extent of any damage to the vessels was not clear Saturday evening, said Lt. Commander Brian Badura of the Fleet Forces Command.

"We have had circumstances where Navy vessels have collided at sea in the past, but they're fairly rare as to how often they do take place," Badura told The Associated Press. Navy officials said the collision was under investigation, but declined to offer specifics on what happens next or on where the incident took place.

"If we do have an incident that does take place, there are folks that swing into action ... to help us make a better, more conclusive explanation of exactly what happened," Badura said. The news release says "overall damage to both ships is being evaluated," and that the sub's propulsion plant was "unaffected by the collision." Both Navy ships are based at Norfolk, Va., and are operating on their own power, the news release says.

The Montpelier (SSN-765), a Los Angeles-class submarine, was the third Navy ship to be named for Montpelier, Vt. A Navy statement about the crash stated that the submarine USS Montpelier (SSN 765) and the Aegia cruiser USS San Jacinto (CG 56) collided around 3:30 pm eastern time, according to ABC News. The Navy's statement elaborated that there were no injuries reported on either vessel, and that the submarine's nuclear power reactor "was unaffected by this collision."

An official with the Navy stated that the two ships were participating in a "group sail" at the time of the collision, along with another vessel. Together the three ships were working on an anti-submarine exercise in preparation for an upcoming deployment as part of the strike group for the USS Harry S Truman aircraft carrier.

The official explained that around 3:30 pm, the bridge watch on the San Jacinto spotted the submarine Montpelier rise to periscope depth about 100 to 200 yards ahead of them. While the bridge ordered an "all back," they still collided with the sub. NBC News notes that the two ships involved in the collision are both operating under their own power. Collisions between Navy submarines and surface warships are rare, but can occasionally happen.

The last occurrence was in March 2009 when the submarine USS Hartford suffered severe damage to its Con tower after it collided with the amphibious transport ship USS New Orleans in the Strait of Hormuz. The investigation afterwards found fault with the commanders aboard the submarine over the collision. Several officers and crew members aboard the submarine were later disciplined for their roles in the accident.

An investigation is expected to see why the submarine and cruiser collided off of the East Coast.
